Context

This lesson introduces students to Holocaust survivor testimonies and artifacts as primary sources which engage a technology they are familiar with using media literacy skills to decode that which they view. Students will engage with Facing History & Ourselves's media literacy resources and survivor stories from Holocaust Museum LA and other Holocaust memorials' TikTok channels. The activity promotes inquiry-based learning and empathy while fostering a deeper understanding of the Holocaust's personal and historical impact.

What is Media Literacy?

Media Literacy is the ability to empower people to use critical thinking skills to become effective communicators and responsible community members when consuming mass media. Mass media refers to all of the ways people consume information.

What is TikTok?

TikTok is a short-form video platform where users create and share content ranging from 15 seconds to 10 minutes, with an algorithm that prioritizes engagement over follower count. It is particularly popular among Gen Z and Millennials, making it a valuable tool for Holocaust education by reaching students where they already are. The platform allows museums and memorial sites to share survivor testimonies, highlight artifacts, and provide historical context in an accessible and engaging way. By leveraging storytelling and emotional impact, TikTok can help combat misinformation and Holocaust denial, ensuring that accurate, expert-backed content reaches a broad audience.

- Survivor testimony and educational videos (hyperlinked TikTok videos and channels):
 1. SHOAH STORIES
- Google Slides \(Lesson Overview\)
- Chart paper or poster boards
- Markers and sticky notes

Differentiation

The combined materials from Facing History & Ourselves and Holocaust Museum LA:

1. Introduces students to fundamental concepts and skills related to media literacy. Students learn what mass media is, practice analyzing pieces of media content, explore ways information can be false or manipulative, and consider the connections between media literacy skills and the strength of democracies.

2. Helps people become responsible and critical information consumers and sharers, and assists them in determining what is true from what is not. Media literacy skills help people assess different situations and understand the complexity of the world. They also help protect people from hate and manipulation. This understanding can stop people seeking out simple solutions and can facilitate problem-solving. A media-literate population can shape the world for the better.
3. Reinforces the following types of skills: reflecting on content, accessing content, analyzing content, creating content, and taking action.
4. Provides an introduction to media literacy skills that promotes mastery through ongoing practice, reflection, and application across diverse learning contexts. Because media literacy skills are developed over time, students should have opportunities to continue to practice them across grade levels and content areas. You can use the framework introduced in this lesson in other aspects of your teaching so that students continue to gain familiarity and confidence with applying it.
5. includes graphic organizers to support English learners and students needing additional guidance in summarizing testimony content. Divide students into small groups to foster collaboration and peer learning.
6. Incorporates historical context or additional survivor testimonies for deeper analysis for advanced learners.

Assessments

1. Contributions to chart paper or poster boards during the gallery walk (formative).
2. Written reflections or group discussions analyzing the testimonies (summative).

KEY TIMELINE OF THE HOLOCAUST

Glossary

Aktion (Action): German word meaning “campaign” or “mission.” Used by Nazi officials for the purposes of deportation or execution of Jews.

Antisemitic/Antisemitism: Hostility toward or hatred of Jews as a religious or ethnic group, often accompanied by social, economic, or political discrimination.

Artifact: A historical object used to understand and connect to past events.

Aryan/Aryanism: The term the Nazis developed to identify the “pure, German race.” The term was used to describe non-Jewish objects and belongings such as “aryan homes” and “aryan papers.” Identification papers at that time were required to state a person’s identity as a Jew or non-Jew. For Jewish people to have “aryan papers” meant that they were in possession of false identity papers that did not label them as Jewish. People were required to always carry identification papers and often had to present them to Nazi officials, Gestapo, and police. If identification papers appeared to be questionable, the person could be arrested, interrogated, beaten, or sent to a concentration camp.

Aryanization: The expropriation and plundering of Jewish property by German authorities and their transfer to “aryan” ownership.

Assimilation: The process by which a person or group of people adapt to another culture’s way of living and are absorbed into the dominant culture of society. Following emancipation, Jews, particularly in cities, often culturally assimilated into the way of life and traditions of the dominant groups around them.

Audience: The group of people who can view content being shared online. Such as followers who like, comment, or share content.

Boycott: Social protest against a group of people or organization, many times aligning with certain ideals.

Usually used as a deceptive tool, clickbait is very often used in social networks like YouTube where the number of views increases because of the title or thumbnail image given to a video.

Concentration Camp: Concentration camps served many different functions, but they were all part of the overarching objective to murder the European Jewish community. Concentration camps included transit camps, forced labor camps, and death camps. These were places of intense dehumanization, mistreatment, and death. Historians estimate that there were over 40,000 Ghettos and Camps across Europe.

Deportation: Forced transfer of Jews to ghettos, concentration camps, or killing centers. When being deported long distances, Jews were generally forced into cattle cars without food, water, proper ventilation, or toilets.

Emancipation: Freeing a group of people that have been restricted socially and legally by the ruling class. Early European countries to grant emancipations were France (1791), Greece (1830), and Great Britain (1858). Warsaw Ghetto Uprising: During Passover in 1943, the remaining Jews of the Warsaw Ghetto learned that they were all to be deported to death camps. For almost a year, underground organizations made up of about 800 ghetto inhabitants had been preparing for the final deportations by stockpiling weapons and explosives. From April 19th to May 16th of 1943, Nazi soldiers and policemen fought with the ghetto’s resistance fighters, ultimately burning the ghetto to the ground. This was the largest and most successful uprising in any ghetto during the Holocaust and demonstrated the Jewish people’s continued will and fight to live.
